All institutions participating in Title IV that have 4-Year Degree Programs must annually make available to current and prospective students, through appropriate publications, mailings, or electronic media, information regarding the types of graduate and professional education in which graduates of the institution's 4-year degree programs enroll. Schools must identify the source of the information, and any timeframes and methodology associated with it.

75% of those polled participated and reported attendance in the following graduate programs:

- 1) Northwest University (Elementary Education)
- 2) Colorado Christian University (Theology)
- 3) A third participant indicated involvement in professional education but did not provide any details
